About

Librarians are masterful at building innovative lessons, programs, and activities that keep students motivated to read. Often, these experiences are successful because librarians have creatively woven in a social element. However, the COVID-19 pandemic has presented public and school librarians, teachers, and districts with the challenge of keeping reading social during hybrid learning.

Please join Bridget Crossman, Stacey Rattner, Kristin Fraga Sierra, and Melissa Thom in a roundtable conversation discussing the importance of and ideas for keeping reading social at all levels during hybrid learning. From classroom activities to community events, participants will leave with a laundry list of ideas that are bound to be a hit for readers. Moderator Ali Schilpp is excited to lead an informative and engaging conversation with built-in time for comments and questions. Bring a friend and ideas to share!

- Of interest to school librarians, teachers, reading specialists, building leaders, public librarians, and special librarians
- Discuss the importance of keeping reading social during hybrid learning
